SUPREME COURT-CHAMBERS.

The Eric Litigation—The Fight Cooling Down—Adjournment of a Host of Motions.

Before Judge Barnard.

An immense array of motions in the Eric litigation had, at various times and on different proceedings, been adjourned from day to day, and at last had so huddled together that, on the last occasion when it was up before the court, about a dozen different matters were adjourned until the 26th. These, together with several other proceedings which had been set down for argument, came up yesterday morning, at half-past ten o'clock. The accretive process had continued so long that a good sized wheelbarrow would have been called into requisition to carry the briefs and papers to the pourt, were it not that the numerous counsel encourt, were it not that the numerous counsel engaged in this apparently endless case, concluding that it was a sort of lator of love in which each was entitled to a share of the giory, and last, though not least, a proportion of the pattry () emolutions and tees, consected, by dividing the aforesaid red tape documents into sandry separate parcels, to carry them under their arms, on their shoulders or in travelling bags to the court.

Having salely and in due time arrived before the justice the cases were called on, and below will be found a "brief" statement of a number of the matters and nature of the proceedings:—

People of the Sale of New York vs. The Eric Rail1000 Company.—Richard Schell vs. The Same Defen. Lants.—John Bloodgood vs. The Same Defen.
2015.—In each case the motion was on the original order requiring the deiendants to show cause why the injunctions should not be continued. The motions were granted proforma to enable a hearing to be had on appeal, if desired, at the June General Term.

be had on appeal, if desired, at the June General Term.

People of the State of New Fork vs. A. S. Diven, Wm. B. Skidmore, Henry Thompson, Jay Goula, Frederick A. Lune, J. C. Buncroft Davis, James Fisk, Jr., and J. S. Eldridge, Directors of the Eric Rativaty Company.—these are the contempt proceedings, in which defendants are charged with violation of the injunction in the scheii suit, by issuing the $10,000,000 of stock on or about the 9th of Marcil. These matters were to have come up to allow the defence to be heard and hie their ex parts amidavits in opposition to the testimony taken in open court in behalf of the people. The court directed that they stand yer until the 28th instant, at eleven o'clock A. M., when the printed testimony taken by the sworm stenographer and corrected by the court will be ready. The court also appointed the third Monday of June, at eleven o'clock, and the Circuit Room, Part 2, as the time and place when the arguments of ready. The court also appointed the third Monday of June, at eleven o'clock, and the Circuit Koom, Part 2, as the time and piace when the arguments of counsel will be heard in cosing the cases.

In the Matter of the Petition of the People by their Attorney General for the Removal of Daniel Drew.—Hearing upon the order to show cause why Drew smould not be peremptorily removed from his office as a director of the Eric Railway Company; also the motion by defendants for a further verineation of the petition. Set down for the third Monday of June.

Richard Schell vs. The Eric Railway Company.—Three motions. The court directed that in these motions an order be entered staying proceedings miner the order appointing the receiver, until a decision shall have been ordered on the appeals recently argued before the General Term.

People, sc., of New York vs. Bric Railway Company; Frank Work vs. Daniel Drew, do.—Two motions for the removal of these causes into the United States Circuit Court. Ordered to stand over until the third Monday of June.

John Bloodgood vs. The Eric Railway Company.—Motion for a stay of proceedings. Set down for the third Monday of June.

There is evidently a desire to shirk the fight in Eric all round, both on the part of judges and counsel, or at least they readily consent to almost any suggestion for an adjournment. All the glory that can be achieved in the case by rapid and brilliant sorties and countermovements has been already larvested, and the whole litigation has come down to dry and heavy arguments on the faces already developed. Those who certainly know (whether they tell the truth about the matter or not is another question) say that the war is ended, and that the whole ponderous affair is mercly being "let down as gently as possible."

SUPREME COURT-CIRCUIT-PART I.

The Windsor Defalcation Case-Verdict for the Plaintiff.

The Mercantile Bank vs. Bodine and Others. This was the suit, already reported in the HERALD. in which the plaintiff sued to recover on a bond, given as surety, in the sum of $10,000, for the faithaui performance by Charles Windsor of his duties as paying telier of the Mercantile Bank. The bond was given in 1851, and in 1864 Windsor decamped for Europe, taking with him, it is alleged, nearly $25,000 of the funds of the bank. At the close of the case yesterday the jury rendered a verdict for plaintiff, without leaving their seats, for the full amount claimed, $10,000, with interest.

Walker said he was going to Cohoes with his family. Soon afterwards the two went aboard the Vanderbilt, and while sitting on the upper deck a stranger appeared and said to Walker 'I have got all your goods on board and want my money, $100.' Walker then gave the stranger what purported to be $50 and said that was all the ready money he had, the balance being in checks. In the emergency Walker appealed to Watt for the ioan of $40 until he could get a check changed: Watt advanced the money, when the unknown man left the boat, and soon Walker expressed a destre to go below to look after his wife and children; but Walt, becoming suspicious, started to follow, when Walker placed in his hand five coins purporting to be $20 goid pieces; but even this security did not satisfy him. The two walked down states and when about going ashore Watt asked some one connected with the boat if the coins were good and was told they were worthless. Walker was then pushed back aboard the board, and officer Cole, of the Fifth precinct; being sent for came and took him into custody. On searching the prisoner the ideutical money obtained from Watt was found in his possession, also a bogus check for $500 on the First National Bank of Buffalo, purporting to have been signed by Hester, Evans & Co. of this city, several shares of off stock in the Petroleum Prize Company, and a counterfeit fitteen cent United States fractional currency. The court met at noon, as usual, resterday, when Mr. Stoughton, counsel for the government, opened an elaborate and exhaustive argument for the prosecution, which occupied upwards of three hours in its delivery. Upon the conclusion of Mr. Stoughton's speech Judge Nelson addressed the jury. His honor, after stating the law governing the estince charged, proceeded to review the more important points of the testimony. With regard to the action of the defendant, Mr. Callicott, in receiving the Hand bond, his honor went on to show that when Hardy applied to Callicott with that bond for a permit he first declined so give the permit, and took the bond to look into it; subsequently when witness called for the permit, he said he believed it was all right. removal thereof. Callicott, the Judge was sorry to say, had entertained the application presented by Cunningham from McMullen for blank permits for the removal of the whiskey, knowing that it would result in no better way than in defrauding the government; thus put upon his guard as to the intention of these two compirators, it was his duty as an honest officer to have seen that fraud was intended in the removal of the two hundred barries from the Wilson warehouse without payment of the tax and without security.

The case was given to the jury at five o'clock, who retired, and after an absence of four hours returned, in compilance with directions from Judge Benedict. After the jury had answered to their names the foreman, in response to the usual questions put by the Clerk, stated that they had not agreed upon a verdict. The Judge then directed the Marshal to furnish some refreshments to the jury, and said that he would be ready to receive the result of their deliberations at eleven o'clock. Should they still fail to agree he would direct the marshal to furnish them with breakfast in the morning, and that he would be in court at ten o'clock in the morning to receive their verdict. The Jury then refired to their room.

THE TURE.

$2,006 Between J. J. Bradley and Captain Gill—Bradley the Winner. The postponed match between J. J. Bradley and Captain Gill for $2,000, mile heats, best three in five, in harness, came off yesterday afternoon and resulted in favor of the former, who won the second, third and fourth heats. In the third heat Bradley exhibited a turn of speed rarely seen on the racecourse in the third quarter of the mile, which he trotted in the surprising time of thirty-four and a half seconds, a rate which astonished every beholder and decided the chances of the race in his favor. The last half mile, which is the most trying portion of the heat and a test of staying power, was nade by him in 1:13, and showed him to be what an old turiman called him upon the course yesterday, "a constant horse, and a horse to bet your money on." This horse Bradley has been very successful in his races this season, being the winner of the remarkable eight heat race that came of about two weeks ago. As we previously stated, he is a Bashaw, a grandson of Long Island Black Hawk, and carries the distinctive family marks of this distinguished breed of horses. He must hereafter take rank with the best in the land, as his performances show him to be an improving horse. His adversary in the match, Capitain gill, is another admirable trotter, and although beaten has lost no credit as a trotting horse. He did all that was expected of him, and had he not been a little too rank would have done still better. As it was he exhibited a sharp turn of speed, particularly in the first quarter of the first heak which he trotted in thirty-five and a quarter seconds, when on the extense outside of the course, and to the half mile pole in 1:13. He is a brown horse, rising fifteen hands high. Although bodilly he is a light appearing harse, yet his muscular development is immense. Inquiring after his pedigree we ascertained that he was sired by a horse called Buoher, his dam a thoroughbred mare. Knowing that Bradley was by Blucher, we supposed they were related; but the difference in their appenrance ledus to further investigation, which resulted in the discovery that there were two Bluchers in different parts of this State, one a black and the other a bay. The black Blucher, the sire of Captain Gill, its of unknown pedigree.

In this race there appeared to be a disposition on the part of the judges to withhold the time made by the horses, as was the case, in the match between Henrietta and Fred Pense the other day. The reason for this conduct seems to be the desire on the part of the owner of Henrietta and Captain Gill to enter them in purses given for horses that have never gone beyond a certain rate of speed in public. Attempts to conceal time are a most certain to fail an old turiman called him upon the course vester-

Union and Fashion courses, as their performances on these tracks are taken as the measure of their abilities, these tracks being known far and hear as exactly a mile in circumsterence.

At the opening of the pools stratley was the first choice and sold at the rate of about one hundred to seventy. The odds afterwards increased for a time and until the horses were accring, when it became evident that full had the most foot in that specialty. The odds then began to decrease, and just before the start thay were about sive to four in favor of Bradley. After the first heat, which was won in such an apparently easy meaner by the Captain, all betting ceased for the time, the backers of Bradley becoming dublous of the result of the race. After he had were a second heat their confidence was reassured, and they freely offered to bet one hundred to forty and in some instances one hundred to their heat one hundred to len went begaing.

be distanced; but the latter steadied himself and struck out nicely from there to the end of the mile, and wascheaten about thirty yards, Captain Gill having broken up about midway up the stretch, when his driver undertook to slow him. Time of the heat, 2:30½. This time was made by half a dozen outside times, the judges not being willing to give the slightest accurately to the public.

Second Heat.—The start was nearly even this time, the judges being determined not to give the slightest advantage to either horse. In an instant after passing the acore Gill took the lead and was soon clear of Bradley, going to the quarter pole nearly two lengths in front of him, in thirty-seven seconds and a half. Bradley squared himself on the backstretch, gradually closing the gap at every stride, and in front of the old stand was at the wheel of Gill and still working his way up. Fifty yards from the half-mile pole he was at Gill's shoulder, but there he faltered and fell back suddenly, Gill passing the post two lengths shead on him in 1:14½. This advantage Gill maintained until about midway of the Flushing end, when he broke up five times in succession, losing a little each time, until he fell two lengths in the rear of Bradley. The latter brought that advantage into the homestretch. Captain Gill came after him with a rush, closing up slowly, but apparently squely, until his head was paralled with Bradley's flank, when he again broke and Bradley beat him over the score half a length in 2:30%.

Third Heat.—Bradley then became a great favorite, one hundred to thirty being current before the start. The horses got away on even terms, but Captain Gill was quickly on the lead, carrying Bradley to a break on the turn, by which mishap he lost three lengths. The Captain led four lengths to the quarter spole in thirty-seven and a half seconds, and notwithstandling a break was half a dozen lengths ahead of Bradley in front of the old stand. He was all of that distance ahead at the half-mile pole, which he passed in 1:15 and going along

The Match for the Championship-Joe Coburt and Mike McCoole to Fight To-Day— Sketches of the Men-Latest Reports Regarding Their Condition-The Battle Ground-

Betting and Speculations.

To-day, should no untoward event occur to mar
the harmony which has thus far characterized the proposed fistic festivities between Joe Coburn and Mike McCoole, it will be decided which of these gladiators shall occupy the position of champion prize fighter of the United States. Throughout the circles of the thousands of 'hammer and tongs' gentry in the country the excitement, as the hour, pregnant with pecuniary hopes and pro-fessional reputation to the principals, draws fessional reputation to the principals, draws near, has almost reached a culminating point, and now, with breathless anxiety, the result is eagerly looked for. From the commencement of the training preparations of these men, ambitious to seek gain and notoriety in the ring, through all the details of the many arrangements incident to and necessary as preit many events in a prize fight of prominence, the first look as fully adverted to, yet a brief resume may not be uninteresting.

OMIGIN OF THE MATCH.

This match was brought about by the bold position assumed by McCoole after his victory over Aaron Jones, a noted English puglist, near Cincinnatt, in August last. He proclaimed himself the champion of the United States, a title not relished and quickly disputed by Coburn, who had, as will be remembered, previously easily whipped him in their first meeting in 1865, at Charlestown, Md.

The consummation of the match, after many weeks.

The consummation of the match, after many weeks' deliberation, caused the greatest excitement, which was increased by the announcement that it was for the unprecedently large amount of $10,000. From that time to the present conjecture upon conjecture, wo can about with hints, suggestions and innendoes, with now and then rather decided statements in regard to contemplated sharp practice, double dealings, &c., has kept alive the excitement. After sifting all mischlevous sayings, it seemed as if both men "meant fight," and the widespead laterest manifested by all classes augmented with the strides of time.

Winess HENRY NODERMOTS, DENNS OF SHEET.

The sciential gladiator, Joe Coburn, and the massive-framed, slow, but powerful Western hero are almost equally well-known, but the annexed detaits will give dates and names worthy of renewed prominent mention:

Joe Coburn was born in Ireland, is 32 years of age and came to this country when quite young. He always showed a great aptitude for boxing and was a constant attendant at sparring exhibitions. His first match was with Ed. Price, of Boxton. They met at Still Point, near Boxton, May 1, 1854, and fought three hours and twenty minutes, the referred and though the date of the context Coburn displayed many high qualities as a puglist, and although it was well known that he had not been properly trained, his friends contended that he would have lasted as long as his opponent. His next fight was with Patsey Flynp; but it was of short duration, as Flynn was no match for Coburn and was defeated in four rounds. After this latter fight Coburn was matched against Harry Oribben for $600a side. The light came off in Oanada on the 18th of November, 1857. Twenty-one rounds were fought in thirty minutes, when Oribben was knecked ont of time. Coburn's next encounter was with Misc McCoole, for $1,000 a side. The fight came off on the 5th of May, 1888, at Charlestown, Gecidounty, Md. Coburn was trained by Prank McIntyre, who also trained him in part for phe present spit. They fought sixty-seven rounds in one hour and ten minutes, when Coburn's next encounter was with Misc proportionately have a retired life until the bold def of McCoole as also of first extraction, about this country at a very early age. In his barlier days he worked in a mannery, but gave up the trade of a currier to work at steamboating on the Mississippi fiver and its tributaries. In this connection he was often necessarily involved in personal encounters with the rough and pugnacious class of men among whom he was known. Here his vast strength and capability of receiving p fought at Twelve Mile Island, near Louisville, Ky, where McCoole was then residing, June 27, 1850. Blake was a big, well built man, weighing about one hundred and eighty-six pounds, while his opponent was some seven pounds heavier. The fight lasted thirty-one minutes, when Blake was knocked out of time in the twenty-minth round by a heavy hit on the body, and McCoole acknowledged the winner. In this fight he showed himself to be a thoroughly game man, a heavy hitter, but devoid of science. His victory, however, gave him a local reputation, and as he was frequently in New Orleans in the ordinary course of his vocation of boatman he was there matched by some of nis friends against Tom Jennings, a puglist belonging to that city. Jennings had just returned from the North, where he had been trying to get on a match with Med Price or Aaron Jones. The former was suffering from an injured hand, while the latter, who had not been living the abstemious life of an anchortic, wanted four months' time to get into condition, and this period Jennings could not, or would not, agree to wait. McCoole was matched against him for $300 a side, and the fight came off a few miles from New Orleans. May 2, 1860. McCoole labored under many disadvantages in this fight; for just as he was on the point of embarking in the steamer he had engaged the boat was seized by the authorities and Mac was obliged to waik, in company with his trainer, a distance of some miles through the swamp and canebrakes to get to the place of fighting. The result of this fight was that Jennings, although he sindiced some damage on his opponent, had not the stamina to withstand the heavy body hitting of McCoole, and after fighting thirty-seven rounds in thirty-three minutes was unable to come up to the call of time, and the latter for the second time was proclaimed the victor. His Western friends afterwards expressed a willingness to match him against Heenan for $3.000 aside, but nothing was effected, in consequence of the departure of the latter for England. The

Each of the men has gone through with his arduous training duties, (Coburn at Harlem and McCoole near St. Louis) zealously, showing an earnestness that each was resolved not to overlook anything which could elevate him to the position of champion, and placing the magnificent stake dependent upon the issue of this day's conflict in his possession. Both have received numerous complimentary testimonials from their respective friends and admirers, and profuse words of advice in regard to the "day of settlement" have also been respectively extended to them.

THE BATTLE GROUND.

If there is no interference, magisterial or otherwise, the fight to-day will take place near Seymour, Ind., about fifty miles from Cincinnati, along the line of the Ohio and Mississippi Railroad. The roped srea will undoubtedly be pitched in some out of the way place, and there the "exhibition" will commence, and big humanity give and take such punishment as is there alone seen.

way place, and there the "exhibition" will commence, and big humanity give and take such punishment as is there alone seen.

Advices late yesterday from Cincinnati give credence to the reports that the queen City is alive with excitement. Sporting men, residents of the East and West, continue to pour in by every train. Many are prominent in puglistic circles, John C. Heenan being particularly noticeable, Betting is, freely indulzed in, the odds fuctuating between the principals, but when offered are freely accepted. Coburn was still at Latonia springs, thirty miles from the spot selected for the battle, where since the 14th instant he has continued his rigid training. His presence there has added materially to the popularity of the place and the presence of an augmented number of men owning fast horses. He weighs about 152 pounds, and it is said feels conddent that victory will fall to his share; yet, contrariwise, it was rumored yesterday in Cincinnati that he had acted indiscreetly on Sunday, causing much uneasiness to his many friends. The accounts regarding the condition of McCoole are very condicting, some representing him in the finest possible state and others asserting that he is burdened with superduous fiesh and is not of hardened appearance. However, this will be definitely settled when the men "shy their cades" in the roped square to-day. In St. Louis the odds are heavy on McCoole, with few takers. It is known that he was gered last week $1,000 that he would gain the first knock down and $1,000 he would whilp Coburn Inside of two hours. McCoole has been sojourning since the 25th in a farm house adjacent to the battle ground. The St. Louis delegation to the ring side will arrive in a special train, and trains of this character will also run from Cincinnati, while Chicago, Louisville, Haitimore and other large cities will aweil the number.

It cannot be positively stated who the seconds of the men will be. Jim Cusick and Bill Yclark will probably wait on Coburn, while McCoole will in all probablity ha

ARON AND SHEPPARD AGAIN.

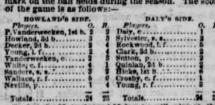

A despatch from Cincinnati yesterday gives the assurance that arrangements have been made between Barney Aaron and Patsey Sheppard to fight in the same ring with the bigger fighting lights for $2,000. This is somewhat improbable, as the original match between these men was recently broken off, much to the disgust and just midgnation of those that had interseted themselves in the anticipated

THE NATIONAL GAME.

Theatrical Match at Mount Morris Square. Nines selected from the attachés of Wallack's, the Olympic, Bowery, Pike's and others of the metropo litan theatres assembled at Mount Morris square, Harlem, yesterday afternoon, and indulged in a little practice at the game of base ball. Sides were chosen by Messrs. Daly and Howland, of the Olympic; and, by Messrs. Daly and Howland, of the Olympic; and, after a pteasant tilt of eight innings, the former came off victorious. Daly, Sutton, George Clark, Yanderwecken, Decker, Neville and others shawed that the "smell of the footlights" had not entirely obliterated the fascinations of the game, and that they could catch the ball as accurately, when properly thrown, as they could take a cue, although many curious attempts at catching were exhibited. The game was looked upon generally as only a practice game; and, judging from the skill exhibited in several instances, the histrionics will make their mark on the ball fields during the season. The score of the game is as follows:—
